StatusactiveGenresports eventDate(s)varyingFrequencyannualInaugurated1990 (1990)Organized by the UCI World Mountain Biking Championships, the UCI Mountain Bike Championships are the world championships in mountain biking in the cross country, downhill and four-cross disciplines. They are organised by Union Cycliste Internationale (UCI), the governing body of world cycling. The first three rankings in each discipline at the World Championships win gold, silver and bronze medals. The winner of each discipline also has the right to wear the rainbow jersey in events of the same discipline until next year's World Cup. Unlike other UCI-approved mountain bike races, competitors at the World Championships represent national rather than commercial teams. The World Cup is usually held towards the end of the season. History The first UCI World Mountain Biking Championship was held in 1990. The separate UCI World Trials Championship was held from 1986 [1] From 2000 to 2016, mountain bike and discipline trials were combined and run as the UCI Mountain Bike & Trials World Championship. Starting in 2017, [2] the Cross-Country Team Relay was added in 1999. The double slalom was added in 2000. The Mountain Bike Marathon was listed at the 2003 Lugane Championship.
